SHAW HOUSE

Shaw House is one of the best preserved Elizabethan mansions in England.

Over the centuries Shaw House has welcomed royalty, seen action during the Civil War, housed soldiers during World War II and schooled generations of local children.

Little remained of the historic furnishings at the time of restoration, which allows our conference and meeting rooms to be presented with a minimalistic finish – perfect for hosting highly efficient conferences, meetings and seminars.

The surroundings may be steeped in history but the facilities are very much set in the twenty first century with digital and audio visual equipment.

We warmly welcome you to Shaw House.

- Competitive rates
- Inclusive technical facilities
- Free WiFi
- Free parking
- Discrete environment
- 1 hours reach of London, Bristol, Oxford & South Coast

‘We enjoy using Shaw House because it is such a beautiful and unique venue. The service we receive is responsive, efficient and cost effective for the range of meetings we hold there.’

A brief history of the House

1581 \

Shaw House was built by Thomas Dolman II. It was then home to successive Dolman families, the flamboyant Duke of Chandos and the Andrews, Eyre and Farquhar families.

1644 \

Shaw House was used as a Royalist strong hold during the English Civil War. It is said that a musket ball was fired at the House, narrowly missing King Charles I.

1939 \

When World War II broke out Shaw House was requisitioned by the War Office to be used as accommodation for British and then American troops.

1943 \

Shaw House began a new life as a school for generations of children after bombs destroyed a local school. The building was then vacated in 1985 due to structural concerns.

2003 \

Restoration began which transformed this historic House into a venue for conferences and events, thanks to grants from the Heritage Lottery Fund, Vodafone and English Heritage.

The House Today \

Shaw House reopened in 2006 and continues to thrive as a tourist attraction and as a unique conference venue, along with offering exhibitions rooms telling the story of the House and a year round programme of events.

First Floor

The Dolman Suite

The three rooms across the central range of the first floor form a suite. When Queen Anne stayed at the House in 1703 this suite would have been used as her state apartment where she slept, dressed and welcomed visitors.

Dolman 1

The largest of the suite and is a very versatile and popular space for large meetings, or those that need breakout areas.

Dolman 2

This is the central room of the state apartment and would probably have been Queen Anne's bedchamber during her stay. Being at the centre of the House this room has fantastic views over the forecourt lawn.

Dolman 2 is a compact room often used as a breakout area. It has beautiful panelled walls and historic fireplace, this room is ideal for smaller and informal meetings.

Dolman 3

The last of the Dolman suite rooms, with original wall panelling finished with reproduction blue wash and a beautiful fireplace.

This is a prestigious, medium-sized option for a meeting or conference.

Ground Floor

Chandos Dining Room

Originally used as a parlour, this room has been decorated to recreate some of the original splendour of the 'Chinese' Dining Room created here in the 1730's by the Duke of Chandos.

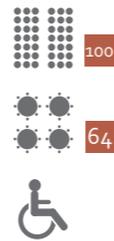

Chandos Dining Room features reproduction silk papers on the walls, natural oak wood floors and a beautiful chandelier and is perfect for group working or seminars.

Great Hall

The Hall was symbolic of the status of Shaw House. It would have been at the centre of manorial life and hospitality, providing guests with a grand sense of arrival.

Decorated with panelled walls, a stone floor, and natural lighting through large windows, the Hall is an impressive and prestigious space for larger conferences and meetings.

Pink and Rose Room

This room was home to Mrs. Farquhar's housekeeper. During restoration original 'Pink and Rose' William Morris wallpaper was uncovered and a small sample can still be seen.

This is a small but versatile room with comfortable seating and boardroom table. A wall mounted 65" screen is available.
