

Colour in the two jays

The Museum has a case containing three jays in the special exhibition Cabinets of Curiosity.

Jays are the most colourful member of the crow family. Despite being so colourful, they can sometimes be quite difficult to see. They are woodland birds who are fond of acorns and in the autumn they bury acorns to retrieve in winter.

Using felt tip pens or colouring pencils, colour in this picture of two of the jays.

