Colour in a colander

This is a piece of a colander. A colander would be found in a Roman kitchen. It was used in food preparation. When whole, it was a large bowl, with lots of small holes across its base, which was used to sieve and strain food.

Using felt tip pens or colouring pencils, colour in.

These activities have been created as part of the Learning & Participation programme at West Berkshire Museum and Shaw House. For more information about our family events please visit http://www.westberkshireheritage.org/whats-on