

Colour in a truncheon

This painted wooden truncheon would have been carried by one of the first police officers in mid-nineteenth century. A truncheon was not just a means of defence, but also to identify that the person was a police officer with the authority to arrest.

Using felt tip pens or colouring pencils, colour in truncheon. You can also design a brightly coloured logo for the 'Borough of Newbury' on it, if you wish.

