

Creative writing challenge: museum curator II

Here's an Anglo-Saxon bracelet of seventeen glass beads strung together on a length of string. It was discovered in a pagan grave in East Shefford. There were other graves too making it a cemetery; the cemetery was first found in 1889 when Lambourn Valley Railway was built. This bracelet was unearthed by an archaeological investigation undertaken by Harold Peake in 1912.

Imagine you are a museum curator and need to write an exhibition label for this object. First, write a heading or headline and then a caption or description. You might like to research online AngloSaxon jewellery.
