

Colour in a Roman bowl

This is a Roman bowl made from clay, found in Thatcham. It is a type of pottery called Samian ware, which is distinctive for being a glossy red, imported from Gaul (France). It would have been very expensive to buy, especially as this is a relatively large and highly decorated example.

Using felt tip pens or colouring pencils, colour in the Roman bowl.

