

Colour in a Saxon buckle

This is an Anglo-Saxon object. It is a buckle, probably used on a belt. The buckle was found in an early Anglo-Saxon pagan cemetery at East Shefford, and is described as 'grave goods', which are objects buried with a person.

Using felt tip pens or colouring pencils, colour in the buckle.

