

Colour in a pair of utility shoes

This is a pair of ladies' shoes in lime green felt. They date from World War II and carry the utility mark meaning that they were part of the Utility Clothing Scheme. The clothing made under this scheme had to follow strict regulations in regards to the amount of material and labour used.

Using felt tip pens or pencils, colour in the utility shoes.

